Bids on Hospital
DEWITT, Ark. (AP) — Cone & Stowers, Inc., of Searcy has submitted an apparent low bid of $269,800 for construction of an 18-bed hospital at DeWitt. A bond issue will finance construction of the proposed 11,170-square foot structure. There were four other bidders.

Poll Tax Error Case Dismissed
MORRILTON, Ark. (AP) — A lawsuit seeking to force Conway County Judge Tom Scott to collect $1 for each error in the current list of poll tax receipts was dismissed Wednesday by Chancellor Wiley Bean. The chairman of the Conway County Better Government League had contended several hundred of the 7,000 listings were erroneous. He argued that each omission of legally required fact in the list constituted an error and the $1 penalties should be assessed. Bean said the time to challenge errors in listings of poll tax holders was on election day when the holders appear to vote. Two previous suits filed by Mobley have been dismissed by Bean. One sought to force Sheriff Mralin Hawkins to file a list of "qualified electors" and another sought preparation of a new poll tax book. The first settlement in Monroe county was at Clarendon about 1819.

Arkansans Vote for Farm Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arkansas House members, except the absent Rep. Dale Alford, voted along Democratic Party lines Thursday as the House killed the administration's farm bill by sending it back to committee. Voting against recommitment were Reps. E. C. Gathings, Oren Harris, Wilbur Mills, Catherine Norrell and James Trimble. The measure was recommitment by a vote of 215 for to 205 against. Alford was in Arkansas continuing his campaign for governor.

Collision Fatal

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Claude Elyard Johns, 74, of Odes, Tex., died in a Fayetteville hospital Thursday several hours after being involved in a head-on collision on state Highway 62, seven miles west of Fayetteville. Hubert E. Gawf, 28, and Gene Grag, 23, both of Talleguah, Okla., who were in the second car, were hospitalized in serious condition.

DOROTHY DIX

Should Wife Have Issued Ultimatum?

By HELEN WORDEN ERSKINE

Dear Helen: After 10 years of happiness with my husband I've felt until now that our marriage was built on the solid rock of trust. A recent illness in my family took me back home. While away my husband wined and dined his best friend's wife.

The best friend saw nothing wrong in this but I do—the wife's past being what it is. Just two years ago she broke up a home like she is breaking up mine. My husband scoffs at the idea. His attitude being that if his best friend doesn't worry, why should he. Besides he wouldn't do anything to cause him trouble. Don't make a mountain out of a mole hill is his line.

I'm terribly hurt. So much so that I issued an ultimatum to him: either drop both the friend and his wife, or me. It took him three weeks to decide he wanted me, not them.

Was I wrong in forcing him to choose? I love him very much. As things now stand the sunshine has gone out of our marriage. To all appearance everything is as usual yet underneath this is far from true. Frankly, I am worried. Since we are both 44, this may seem silly, but if anything, I care more than when I was younger. What to do now is the question. —Disappointed

Dear Disappointed: The very fact that you raise the question proves that, in your heart, you doubt the wisdom of your action. Forbidden fruit is the sweetest. To make an issue of what was probably a minor flirtation is to run the risk of blowing it up into a major romance. The divorce rate would plummet if wives only used a little more intelligence in handling such situations. You should have ignored the whole business but since you didn't, try to pick up the pieces and go on as before—if possible all the stronger for the near catastrophe.

Take stock of your marriage. What attracted your husband to his friend's wife? Did she flatter him? Is she better looking than you? Was it the novelty? In other words, what did she have that you haven't? Find out and give it to him but not before you've nullified that ultimatum by admitting you were a bit over-emotional because you loved him. And you want to make amends by inviting the friend and his wife to dinner. Does he approve?

That puts the decision up to him and thereby saves him loss of face, which is all important if you hope to preserve your marriage.

Dear Helen: I am 16 years old and soon to be a mother. I don't know who the father of my child is. A boy I like an awful lot wants to marry me and give the baby a name. Rather than see him hurt, as he surely will be, I have turned him down.

People are beginning to talk. I would rather die than hurt my mother's mother. She's so kind and sweet.

I just can't bring myself to tell her or my father's folks. They'll just be mean, holding it against me for the rest of my life. Should I marry that boy? He still calls me. —Wronged

Dear Wronged: Don't marry the boy unless you love him. Even then, think twice. He may mistake pity for love. Tell your mother and the grandmother you love. Consider having the baby away from home and give it out for adoption. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a list of homes for unwed mothers in your area.

SHORTY

A 2-Minute Story © 1962 by NEA, Inc.

PERFECT TIMING
By JAN SMITH

As Canfield approached the outskirts of the city he checked again. No headlights in either direction. No one following. He made a sharp right turn into a narrow dirt road and switched off his car lights.

Now, as he had practiced many times before, he drove on slowly, checking his mileage gauge in the spot of light cast by a tiny flash. At exactly .5 mile he turned right again, passing between towering stone pillars and entering a long curved driveway lined with bristling rows of pines. After one more mile he cut his motor and rolled silently onto the paved apron of a garage.

He sat in the car, his slight frame, slumped over the wheel, breathing heavily, as if he had run all the way from his jewelry store downtown. Harry B. Canfield Company, Custom Jewelry.

That was a laugh. Custom jewelry went out with the grande dames and their one-of-a-kind diamond tiaras.

He pulled off his glasses and polished them thoughtfully. Increasingly in recent years he had been forced to stock more and more cheap, ugly costume jewelry. No money in that, nor in installment plan engagement rings. Not in this town, anyway. Now, there was nothing really good left except, of course, the fabulous Princess Marietta Collection, heavily insured, and now in the non-descript brown bag resting on the car seat beside him.

He patted the bag and sighed. For years this gem collection had been the prime display in his shop window. Almost everyone who passed by stopped and admired it, but none had the money to buy. No other jeweler in the city had such a priceless collection.

Alice's insistence on living in this big stone house and on the kids attending expensive Eastern schools had drained his finances beyond recoup. Bitterly, he realized his jewelry company was fast plummeting to ruin. Only he knew the corrosion that existed behind the plush facade of their lives. Utter desperation had driven him to this last-ditch attempt at salvation. The money he would collect from the insurance company would help get him back on his feet.

He checked the time. 4:12 a.m. Just a few minutes before the burglar alarm would go off and bring Patrolman Grant to the "scene of the crime." Grant would be in front of the dry cleaner's half a block down the street right now and could easily hear the alarm at the jewelry store. It was vital that this robbery look authentic in every respect, so he had rigged the burglar alarm to go off exactly one hour after his departure with the stones.

After weeks of practice he had everything timed to the second. He had watched Officer Grant walk his rounds several nights and had his schedule down pat. He had parked his car just beyond the entrance to the alley and run 100 feet to the back of his shop in the safe cover of the alley's darkness. Then he quickly and carefully did his work, was back in his car and away before Grant was anywhere in sight.

So far everything had worked out splendidly. It just went to show how careful preparation would always pay off. Canfield had perfect timing. He glanced at the luminous dial of his watch. Well, not much time left. He picked up the precious bag and slid out of the car. With painstaking care he let himself into the house. As he groped his way down the familiar hallway the heavy silence was broken by the shrill summons of the telephone bell. He let it ring twice more than picked up the receiver.

"Hello?"
"Mr. Canfield?"
The voice was very gruff and very official. Even before the owner of that voice revealed his identity, Canfield had recognized it. Yes, it was the police.

"Yes."
"This is Nick Grant, Precinct 7 night patrolman. I'm at your jewelry store. Someone broke in. I heard the burglar alarm but he got clean away. He swiped those crown jewels you always have in your front window. Don't know if he got away with anything else, though, so we'd like you to come down and check."
"Great Scott! I'll be down as soon as I can get my clothes on!"

Canfield tried his best to show proper concern.
"Fine. Say, Mr. Canfield, I don't want to raise your hopes, but I may have a line on this guy already. About an hour ago I noticed a car parked near the alley south of your store. I hung a ticket on it because it was parked right smack in front of the fire hydrant there. Kinda wondered at the time what anybody was doing there that time of night. Headquarters is checking out the license number right now and it may be we'll catch your thief before you know it. See you here at the store in a little while, Mr. Canfield. Try not to worry too much."

The End

Farm Bill Is

The statement made no reference to the Democrats who voted against the bill.

The powerful American Farm Bureau Federation, which led the fight against the bill, called the House action a "victory for farmers, consumers and taxpayers," adding, "the only losers were the political empire builders in Washington."

The bill would have placed mandatory acreage reductions and national marketing quotas for the first time on feed grains and wheat. These crops have contributed most to the massive surplus stocks now held by the govern-

Charles Wessell

Now, manager of Safeway Stores, Inc., here is Charles Wessell who has been assistant manager of the local store. Mr. Wessell helped open the local store in 1953, serving as assistant manager. He was transferred to El Dorado and back to Hope. He started with the company 10 years ago at Pine Bluff. Mr. and Mrs. Wessell are members of the Lutheran Church and have two children, Debora 7, and Carl 2.

Such controls were the only hope of reducing costs of federal price support programs, backers of the measure claimed.

The Senate already has passed a bill very similar to the one snuffed out in the House. The Senate measure could be brought to the House floor if it is approved by the House Agriculture Committee. But this did not appear likely because the committee approved its own bill by a margin of only one vote.

Rep. Harold D. Coley, D-N.C., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee and floor chairman of the bill, indicated it was unlikely the House would act on the Senate bill.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman had invested an enormous amount of time and effort to persuade his fellow Democrats to vote for the bill, and spent most of the three-day debate in an office just across a hall from the House chamber. Republicans derided his efforts as pressure tactics and arm-twisting.

Just after Thursday night's vote Freeman emerged from the office looking stunned and unbelieving.

Texan Trying to Take Over Crossett Co.

New York, (AP) - A move by the Georgia-Pacific Corp. to gain control of the Crossett Co., Arkansas lumber-paper firm, may be challenged by Texas lumber magnate Arthur Temple Jr., it was reported Wednesday.

Industry sources said Temple, 42-year-old head of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association and president of the Southern Pine Lumber Co. of Diboll, Tex., would challenge a bid by Georgia-Pacific to buy Crossett stock.

Georgia-Pacific announced in April it had agreed to pay $55 a share for 100,000 shares of Crossett held by the Crossett family if it could obtain a majority of the company's stock from other stockholders. The Crossett family shares represent about 2 percent of Crossett's 2,289,102 outstanding shares of class a and class b stock.

Temple, who was in New York, declined to comment on reports of his interest in Crossett except to say that "we are friends of the people at Crossett and we've always had a great respect for their operations."

Arkansas Part of Suicide Pact

Taipei, Formosa, (AP) - U.S. officials said Wednesday Airman 3c. John R. Evans, 19, of Floral, Ark., is in good condition but still is hospitalized for observation following an attempted suicide Sunday.

A spokesman for the U.S. Taiwan defense command said Evans, who is stationed at Tainan Air Station in southern Formosa, took an overdose of tranquilizers Sunday, but never was in serious condition.

Chinese Nationalist police said Tuesday that Evans and a Chinese bar girl made an apparent suicide pact. The girl died Monday.

Background on Deer Herds in Arkansas

By Gus Albright
News Editor
Arkansas Game and Fish Commission

Knowing what has happened and why, is a big help in understanding most any subject. This includes deer management. So let's look back into the ups and downs of the Arkansas deer herds.

What has happened to the land, forests and deer since primitive times. It will bring the present picture into clearer focus.

For all practical purposes civilization came to Arkansas about 1800. Before that time the wild creatures weren't much bothered by humans. For the most part this was a big timber country. The big trees were great for squirrels but poor for deer.

The deer lived near marsh and swamp borders, in shrubby openings caused by fires and wind-thrown trees, and in thickets along creeks, bayous and rivers.

Records left behind by explorers and Indians show deer as being present, but not in the vast numbers we have come to accept as normal today.

Deer are creatures of the brushland. They depend on low growing trees and shrubs for food. Where there is little low growth, deer will be scarce. Solid stands of big timber produce little food and few deer.

The lumbermen came to Arkansas about 1825. Without realizing it they conducted the biggest and best deer habitat improvement program possible. In the "openings," brush and young trees thrived. Deer food came in thick and by 1850 deer were plentiful in much of the state.

However, two events were about to take place at the same time that darkened the Arkansas deer picture — (1) Fire, (2) A market for venison.

Tops, limbs and other debris left behind by loggers is called "slash." When this accumulates and dries out it becomes a tinderbox. An uncontrolled slash fire is about as hot as they come.

Logged-off areas were burned over and over, killing seed trees, seedlings and seeds. These areas became grasslands and deer do not thrive on grass alone. The deer herds went downhill. It was helped along by "two cents a pound venison."

Lumber camps and growing cities needed meat, and venison was good and plentiful. Tales about and by market hunters are legend. They used dogs, traps, snares and guns. By the late 1800s railroads in all parts of the country were doing a tremendous deer hauling business.

There were no refrigerator cars in those days, so in warm weather the traffic was in hides only. The meat was left for the varmints.

Deer were also hunted for sport but this had little effect on the herds compared to the steady pressure of the professionals.

It wasn't until about 1915 that the sporting qualities of the whitetail were starting to be recognized, and we entered an era of increasing legal protection for deer.

In 1916 the newly created Game and Fish Commission placed a 61-day open season on deer. At that time the population was estimated to be only a few thousand.

Other laws followed, but the deer continue to decrease. The "duck law" was passed in 1919. The low point seems to have been reached about 1930, when it was estimated that only a few deer were left in the state.

Regardless of the accuracy of this estimate, it is evident that a terrible and needless waste had taken place.

When to Fish or Hunt Solunar Tables

By John Alden Knight

The schedule of Solunar period as printed below, has been taken from John Alden Knight's Solunar Tables. Plan your days so that you will be fishing in good territory or hunting in good cover during these times, if you wish to find the best sport that each day has to offer.

The Major periods are shown in bold face type. These begin at the time shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter. The minor periods, shown in regular type, are of somewhat shorter duration.

Many World Records in Danger

By BOB MYERS

Associated Press Sports Writer

WALNUT, Calif. (AP)—Eight championships with several world records endangered, go on the line tonight as the National AAU track and field carnival starts a two-night run.

More than 400 athletes are gathered for this 74th annual meet and such world title claimants as Dallas Long, Frank Budd and Robert Hayes are scheduled to compete in the opening program.

The site is Mt. San Antonio College's Memorial Stadium, a 12,000-seat arena tucked away in the rolling San Jose hills near Los Angeles.

Meet director Hilmer Lodge listed no less than eight world records which he feels are in danger, including tonight's 100-yard dash, the 120-yard high hurdles, the shot put and broad jump.

Other final events tonight are the 440-yard hurdles, the javelin and the 6-mile run.

Dallas Long, who has a claim in for the world shot put mark at 65 feet, 10 1/2 inches, and Gary Gubner of New York, with a best of 64-11, dominate the event.

The 100 features Frank Budd, who holds the world time of 9.2; Hayes, who has tied 9.2, and Harry Jerome of Oregon, who hopes to improve his best of 9.3.

The 120-yard high hurdles might well be the top race of the evening. A veteran of 23, Hayes Jones, from Detroit, faces tough opposition from Jerry Tarr of Oregon. Tarr has a best mark of 13.3 this year.

Ford, Mantle Could Make Big Difference

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

If the American League has the shakes today, there are two good reasons for it.

One is Whitey Ford. The other is Mickey Mantle.

Together, those New York Yankee roommates may hold the key to the league's pennant race. They have been on the injured list—Ford with an ailing arm, Mantle with an injured leg—and the perennial champion Yankees went into a tailspin to fourth place.

But Ford, a lefty who compiled a spectacular 25-4 record last season, sent a tremor through the league with a three-hit shutout of Baltimore Thursday.

And now the rest of the league is watching Mantle, the switch-hitting Yankee star, Mickey is going to make the big test of his ailing legs in Detroit tonight.

Ford's 3-0 effort over Baltimore marked his first victory since May 9, and ended a five-game Yankee losing string. The win pulled the Yanks to within three games of the top when leading Cleveland lost to Boston 3-1.

The Los Angeles Angels scrambled into second place, four percentage points ahead of Minnesota, on the strength of a 3-1 triumph over Kansas City, while the Chicago White Sox beat the Twins 6-2. Detroit stopped Washington 6-3.

Art Mahaffey's five-hit shutout brought Philadelphia a 3-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs in the only National League game scheduled.

Ford didn't leave much to guesswork in his effort against the Orioles. He allowed only three hits before developing a blister on his pitching hand. He retired after 6 2-3 innings and Marshall Bridges finished up.

Clete Boyer and Hector Lopez drove in the first two New York runs and Bill Skowron's 10th homer finished up the scoring.

Earl Wilson and Dick Radatz combined for a three-hitter against Cleveland. Wilson (5-2), the Red Sox starter, got credit for the victory.

Chicago jammed in four runs in the first inning, then retreated behind the excellent relief pitching of Eddie Fisher (3-3) to beat the Twins. Fisher allowed only two hits in 7 2-3 innings of relief.

A two-run double by Al Smith was the key hit in the White Sox big first inning.

Bo Belinsky, the Angels' colorful lefty, pitched Los Angeles into percentage control of second with a seven-hitter. Belinsky got help from Billy Moran's run-scoring triple and Felix Torres' homer.

Purnal Goldy's single in the seventh drove in the run that broke a 3-3 tie and put the Tigers ahead to stay against Washington.

The Senators got homers from Chuck Hinton and Harry Bright, with Mike Roarke and Norm Cash hitting homers for the winners.

Mahaffey's shutout snapped five-game Cub winning string and evened his record at 8-8.
